KIDNAP SUSPECT INVOLVES OTHERS WHILE AWAITING HEARING TODAY

Kenneth Buck Tells Reporters Two Others in Case, Then is Silent

COURT IS CROWDED

Others Left Child With Him, Asserts

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., May 8.—Kenneth Buck, 28-year-old kidnaper of Peggy McMath, told newspapermen while he was awaiting to be arraigned in the district court here today that others besides his brother, Cyril Buck, were involved in the kidnapping.

First he said there were two others involved—then, under further questioning, became evasive and secretive and would not say specifically whether there was only one more in the kidnap plot or two more.

"I won't say anything else," he cried again and again after he had committed himself.

Kenneth Buck was asked by the reporters whether the others involved were local men or from some other place—say New York City or Boston.

The prisoner thought a long time, then blurted out: "I won't say any more."

IN COURT TODAY

Kenneth and his elder brother, Cyril, sat in a six-foot square prisoner's dock in the court room awaiting arraignment when he was interviewed. The local police officer was guarding the railing surrounding the dock but made no effort to stop the reporters from questioning the prisoners.

Kenneth sat with his hat off and his overcoat on. Judge Robert Welch, who was to preside at the arraignment, and the various authorities were in conference in an ante-room.

Court had not been called and a large crowd had taken every inch of available space in the room. The corridors were jammed.

The reporters began the interview by asking Kenneth Buck how he felt.

"I feel sick," he replied, "I had no sleep last night."

He was extremely nervous as he moved in his chair.

"It's awful, isn't it?" he said, expecting sympathy.

Then out of a clear sky he exclaimed:

"There was somebody else in this. They left me with the child. Immediately the reporters bombarded him with questions as to who 'somebody else' was. Was it one more or two more? The prisoner was evasive. Finally to a question: 'Was it two more?' he answered 'Yes.'"

Kenneth Buck was asked why "they" had left him with the child. "They became alarmed," he said. The reporters prodded him with questions. After an interval of silence he said quite firmly:

"I better not say any more. I won't say any more until I get a lawyer."

Officials said a special session of the grand jury would probably be called within ten days for the purpose of indictment of the Buck brothers. In the meantime the authorities will obtain all the evidence possible for presentation to the grand jury.

He said he had no evidence that New York gangsters might have been implicated in the kidnap plot. He remarked, however, that he knew Kenneth was a rum-runner. He was once a taxi driver in New York City, but gave this occupation up to become a rum-runner.

The arraignment was delayed while District Attorney William C. Crossley conferred with the judge.

MANY HOMELESS AS BLAZE SWEEPS CITY

ELLSWORTH, Me., May 8.—Sweeping uncontrolled for seven hours before it finally was checked, fire of suspected incendiary origin today wiped out the business section of this city, jumped into the residential areas, made two hundred families homeless and did damage estimated at over a million dollars.

At the height of the fire the water supply became exhausted and firemen from this city and a score of surrounding communities resorted to dynamite to check the conflagration.

As relief agencies set to work to provide food and shelter for the homeless and a checkup showed no casualties, except for a few persons with minor burns, police, with a hundred citizens sworn in as deputies, went on guard duty in the burned districts to prevent looting.

BLAME "FIRE BUG"

The police and fire departments, together with state officials, launched an investigation, the officials opinion being that the fire was of incendiary origin.

Some estimates of the damage wrought by the flames went as high as $2,500,000.

City Hall, the Methodist and Baptist churches, Hancock Hall, a bank, large business blocks and two hundred stores and dwellings were destroyed.

Starting in an abandoned theatre the flames spread rapidly the entire length of Hancock street, covering an area of two miles before they were brought under control.

Although the flames raged fiercely, gaining headway two hours after the start at 10:30 p. m., not a single death was reported.

The fire brought fire apparatus from a thirty mile radius and thousands of curious, all roads being clogged with motorists.

When Fire Chief Roy Goodwin announced that the fire was under control, flames were roaring in the business district.

Before this a man was seen setting a fire in an empty building a hundred yards from the heart of the main fire, but he escaped.

RENEWED LAND INTEREST SEEN

Sale of Harry Renick Property Brings Near Appraised Value.

SIX TRACTS SOLD

Spirited Bidding Shown in Saturday Sale.

A renewed interest in land was evidenced here Saturday afternoon when 1,106 acres of Jackson and Muhlenberg-twp land, property of the estate of the late Harry R. Renick, were sold at an executor's sale. The prices almost reached the appraised value of the property.

The figure brought by the sale was $31,323.41 while the appraised value was $34,467.

Barton Walters is executor of the estate.

The first three tracts were offered first as separate tracts and then as a group. The price of $10,895.76 offered for the group of three was higher than the total of the individual offers so the three tracts, amounting to 663 acres, were sold to Mrs. Elizabeth F. Leist, wife of C. A. Leist, N. Pickaway-st.

The fourth tract of 75 acres was sold to Charles Bolender, this city, at $20.10 an acre. The total price was $1,504.50.

The sale was originally scheduled for March 11 but because of prevailing money conditions was postponed until May 6.

Mrs. Mary Renick Greeno, legate, was represented at the sale by Attorney Charles Dresbach and Richard Simkins.

Before he began his fast, Gandhi received newspapermen in his jail cell.

Dressed only in a loin-cloth and with a wet towel about his head to counteract the heat, Gandhi maintained complete silence while his secretary recited his favorite hymn. Friends and disciples ranged about him joined in the demonstration.

The Mahatma then asked all visitors to withdraw. In a written statement he appealed to the public to accord him complete peace and rest. In the statement he

F. D. TO URGE FAIR WAGES, LISTS STEPS

Change in Anti-Trust Laws Seen as President Goes on Air Sunday

DEFENDS INFLATION

Nine Recovery Steps Taken, He Shows

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Modification of the anti-trust laws was to be President Roosevelt's next demand on congress in his drive to restore fair wages and normal working hours.

The administration, it became apparent today, has decided that industry should be permitted to enter into agreements covering production and wage scales—barring only the creation of monopolies.

A message will go forward to Capitol Hill this week asking for

NEW YORK, May 8.—The stock market turned around today after Saturday's shakeout as Wall Street's flagging spirits were revived by President Roosevelt's radio address and reports of further improvement in business.

Under aggressive sponsorship the list moved forward toward midday and gains of 1 to more than 3 points were registered. Profit-taking developed on the bulge but the market showed a strong undertone.

The necessary legislation to ease existing restrictions.

Creation of an emergency body similar to the war industries board is expected to be the federal check of any protective steps that the various industries may undertake.

PRESIDENT TO SANCTION

President Roosevelt is prepared to sanction this newest move in the battle to bring back more normal conditions because he has found that many concerns are taking advantage of the depressed situation to hire "sweatshop" labor and undersell legitimate firms.

The executive gave clear notice of this intention last night in his second radio accountability of his eight weeks in the White House.

"The unfair ten percent could produce goods so cheaply," he said, "that the fair ninety percent would be compelled to meet the unfair conditions."

"Here is where the government comes in. Government ought to have the right and will have the right, after surveying and planning for an industry, to prevent, with the assistance of the overwhelming majority of that industry, unfair practices and to enforce this agreement by the authority of government."

"The so-called anti-trust laws were intended to prevent the creation of monopolies and to forbid unreasonable profits to those monopolies."

"That purpose of the anti-trust laws must be continued, but these laws were never intended to encourage the kind of unfair competition that results in long hours, starvation wages and overproduction."

TELLS OF ACTIVITY

Mr. Roosevelt gave his radio account of his stewardship in simple language.

"Two months ago," he said, "we were facing serious problems. The country was dying by inches."

He listed nine steps, accomplished or in the making, that his administration had put forward to meet the situation. They were:

1. Employment of 250,000 men in the national forests;

2. Opening of the Tennessee river basin for an ambitious project.

Tigers Finish Fourth As Delaware Annexes Meet

Dean White Annexes Red and Black's Only First Place In High Jump; Five League Records Fall During Match At Ohio State Stadium.

By Reynold Greene

With an array of seasoned veterans on its squad, Delaware high school won the Central Buckeye league meet hands down, Saturday before a slim crowd at the Ohio State university stadium.

Circleville narrowly evaded the cellar position edging Westerville by one point.

The standing:

Westerville, 59 points.
Bexley, defending champion, 52 1/2.
Maysville, 32 1-4.
Circleville, 21.
Westerville, 20.

Dean White won Circleville's only first place in the high jump when he went five feet, five inches.

Five former records were shattered during the meet: the new ones set up in the pole vault, 100-yard dash, 440-yard dash, javelin and mile relay events.

A cold, drizzling rain failed to halt the meet, however, and with a good fast track holding up well under the prevailing conditions the harriers rambled for fast times over the course and continually had the small array of spectators in an uproar.

FINISHES CLOSE

Close finishes in the dash events prevailed throughout the meet showing that although some teams were composed largely of green material that they will soon hop into the limelight as real competition in any one league.

Circleville was one of the teams that even though green proved itself a threatening foe in several events.

Sharp of Delaware is the new record claimant in the 100 yard dash with a time of 10.2 seconds, bettering the time of Stark of Bexley established last year by one tenth of a second.

Max DeGood of Maysville hung up a new record in the pole vault to shoot at when he boosted himself over the bar to gain the height of 11 feet, bettering the record of 10 feet 6 inches by Ned Thacher of Circleville.

The record of 55 seconds in the 440 yard dash established by LeRoy Moore of Circleville last year saw another second clipped off the time by Ballard of Westerville who is now the record holder having a time of 54 seconds flat.

The javelin throw record of 162 feet established by Sell of Delaware last year was bettered by Heinlen also of Delaware who hurled the spear for a distance of 163 feet.

RELAY MARK GONE

Circleville's mile relay record of 3 minutes; 51.2 seconds made last year also came in for a cut when Delaware's flashy quartet composed of Wilson, Ross, Heinlen and Kessler clipped the time to 3 minutes 49.2 seconds.

The summary follows:

TRADE NOW MAKES CARD CONTENDERS

NEW YORK, May 8.—The St. Louis-Cincinnati trade yesterday which brought Shortstop Leo Durocher to the Cardinals, made them dangerous contenders for the National league pennant but may spell "curtains" for Rogers Hornsby, seven times league batting champion.

With Durocher at shortstop, Frisch moved back to second base to replace Hornsby, and with a fine pitching staff, St. Louis has the best defensive team in the league. Hornsby, troubled by weak underpinning in his comeback attempt, is relegated to the role of utility infielder and pinch hitter. He may not survive the housecleaning when the reduced player limit goes into effect a week from today.

Six players were involved in the latest link in the big chain of St. Louis-Cincinnati trades. The Cardinals acquired Durocher and two veteran pitchers, Curley Ogden and Dutch Henry, whom they will ship to the minors. Cincinnati got Sparky Adams, third baseman, and two pitchers, Paul Derringer and Allyn Stout. Derringer won 18 games in 1931, his first year with St. Louis. Last year he won 11 and lost 14.

Durocher and Adams broke in with their new teams yesterday. Durocher got two hits and felled in his usual brilliant style. Joe Morrissey replaces him as the Cincinnati shortstop.

The trade, made on an even basis, was considered a good one for both clubs.

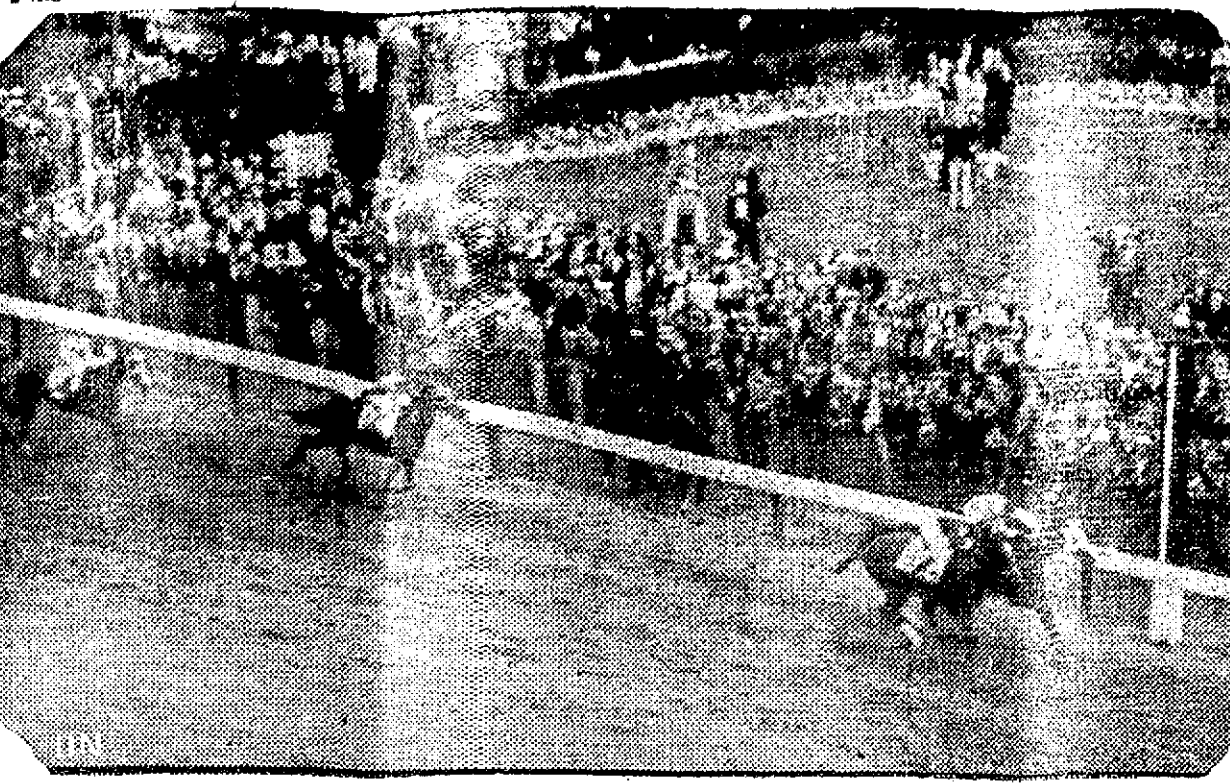

Daily Drama

By International News Service

The heroes—Hal Schumacher, Giants, and Earl Averill, Cleveland. Schumacher blanked Cincinnati, 5 to 0, yielding only two hits, in second game of twin bill. Averill clouted eight hits, seven of them in a row, in two games against Yankees.

The goats—Bill McAfee, Washington, and Bob Smith, Cincinnati. McAfee, nominated to stop a Detroit rally in the 10th inning, promptly lost the game by uncorking a wild pitch. Smith held Giants to two hits in first game of twin bill but lost, 1 to 0, on Leslie's homer.

AS BROKER'S TIP CAPTURES DERRY JUST BY A NOSE!

Broker's Tip, the winner, noses out Head Play for victory in a thrilling finish to the 1933 Kentucky Derby. View shows the exciting finish. Charley O is seen trailing. Time—2:06 1-5.

EARLY ACTION ON BATTLE OF JOCKEYS SEEN

Board of Stewards To Investigate Dressing Room Fight.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 8.—The board of stewards was to take action today in the exchange of fisticuffs between Jockeys Herb Fisher and Don Meade which came as a postlude to the much-discussed nose victory of Broker's Tip over Head Play in 59th renewal of the Kentucky Derby Saturday.

Fisher's claim of a foul by Meade as the latter rode Col. E. R. Bradley's horse to win is forgotten, as far as the stewards are concerned, but the blows exchanged in the jockey's dressing room after the trophy was presented will be gone into thoroughly, they said.

The battle that ended in the dressing room began as the 3-year-olds swung into the stretch. In his effort to push Charley O. wide Fisher swerved Head Play sufficient to give Meade his opening along the rail and he shot Broker's Tip through.

NUDGED EACH OTHER

From then on it was a battle between Broker's Tip and Head Play, riding stride for stride, and frequently nudging one another.

"He tried to trick me out of it, and as a matter of fact I tricked him," said Jockey Meade in answer to Fisher's charge that "he beat me out of it."

The basis of Fisher's charge was that Meade had grabbed his saddle blanket during the rough-riding, but a photograph taken as the two thoroughbreds thundered across the finish line showed Fisher had Meade's saddle blanket in a tight grip.

While the controversy was still raging the champion 3-year-old, Broker's Tip, departed for Maryland where he will fight it out with Head Play again in the Preakness. Head Play goes today.

Ladysman, the favorite, belonging to W. R. Coe, left with others of the eastern contingent for Maryland.

Charley O., which finished third in the Derby, will rest up here while for the American derby at Washington—Park, Saratoga, and Trade Call will remain here until cured of the illness which cropped out after their arrival.

NEW STRENGTH FOR RED BIRDS NEARING

COLUMBUS, May 8.—This city's American association baseball club, the Red Birds, today was expected to receive new player strength as the result of a six-man deal made yesterday by the Cincinnati Reds and the St. Louis Cardinals.

John Ogden and Frank (Dutch) Henry, pitchers, two of the sought after by the trade, will be all likelihood be sent to the Red Birds as the Cards are rich in pitching strength.

Ogden and Henry, together with Leo Durocher, shortstop, were traded to the Cards by the Reds for Earl (Sparky) Adams, infielder, and Paul Derringer and Allyn Stout, pitchers. There was no cash involved in the deal.

A double in the ninth inning with two mates on bases gave the Birds their second straight game over Kansas City. They are in Milwaukee today.

Duray Owns Title of Most Colorful Loser In Automobile Racing World

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 8.—The most colorful loser in automobile racing will try again in the annual 500-mile classic at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway May 30.

Leon Duray, whose 11 years in competition in the Decoration Day contest has won $2,200 in sixth place prize money, is one of the last minute entries.

Duray will desert his two cycle motor principles, which he has pattered with for the past two years and bring to the track this year a new 4-cylinder, 220 cubic inch four cycle power plant.

Holder of the fastest lap record ever made over the two and a half mile track which he traveled at 124.018 miles an hour, Duray has always been a fast qualifier when his cars would run and has held the pole position many times. He is as daring a pilot as ever tooted a car through the sharp turns of the Hoosier track but one of the most unfortunate.

Since his first race in 1922, Duray has only once found a car which would hold together for 500 miles under his terrific driving and in 1925 placed sixth for a cut of the prize money. He has made eight attempts in these 17 years and for three years inability to get his car ready for qualification kept him on the sidelines. His complicated two cycle, 11-horsepower, 100 cc. engine, which he had built at the garage last year.

There is probably no writer/modern times who has revealed himself to mankind with more loquacity than Voltaire.

Tigers Finish Fourth As Delaware Annexes Meet

Dean White Annexes Red and Black's Only First Place In High Jump; Five League Records Fall During Match At Ohio State Stadium.

By Reynold Greene
With an array of seasoned veterans on its squad, Delaware high school won the Central Buckeye league meet hands down, Saturday before a slim crowd at the Ohio State university stadium.
Circleville narrowly evaded the cellar position edging Westerville by one point.
The standing:
Westerville, 59 points.
Bexley, defending champion, 52 3-4.
Marysville, 32 1-4.
Circleville, 21.
Westerville, 20.

Dean White won Circleville's only first place in the high jump when he went five feet, five inches.
Five former records were shattered during the meet: the new ones set up in the pole vault, 100-yard dash, 440-yard dash, javelin and mile relay events.

A cold, drizzling rain failed to halt the meet, however, and with a good fast track holding up well under the prevailing conditions the harriers rambled for fast times over the course and continually had the mass array of spectators in an uproar.

FINISHES CLOSE
Close finishes in the dash events prevailed throughout the meet showing that although some teams were composed largely of green material that they will soon hop into the limelight as real competition in any one league.

Circleville was one of the teams that even though green proved itself a threatening foe in several events.

Sharp of Delaware is the new record claimant in the 100 yard dash with a time of 10.2 seconds, bettering the time of Stark of Bexley established last year by one tenth of a second.

Max DeGood of Marysville hung up a new record in the pole vault to shoot at when he boosted himself over the bar to gain the height of 11 feet, bettering the record of 10 feet 6 inches by Ned Thacher of Circleville.

The record of 55 seconds in the 440 yard dash established by LeRoy Moore of Circleville last year saw another second clipped off the time by Ballard of Westerville who is now the record holder having a time of 54 seconds flat.

The javelin throw record of 162 feet established by Sell of Delaware last year was bettered by Heinlen also of Delaware who hurled the spear for a distance of 163 feet.

RELAY MARK GONE
Circleville's mile relay record of 3 minutes 51.2 seconds made last year also came in for a cut when Delaware's flashy quartet composed of Wilson, Ross, Heinlen and Kessler clipped the time to 3 minutes 49.2 seconds.

The summary follows:

TRADE NOW MAKES CARD CONTENDERS

NEW YORK, May 8.—The St. Louis-Cincinnati trade yesterday which brought Shortstop Leo Durocher to the Cardinals, made them dangerous contenders for the National league pennant but may spell "curtains" for Rogers Hornsby, seven times league batting champion.

With Durocher at shortstop, Frisch moved back to second base to reduce Hornsby, and with a fine pitching staff, St. Louis has the best defensive team in the league. Hornsby, troubled by weak underpinning in his comeback attempt, is relegated to the role of utility infielder and pinch hitter. He may not survive the housecleaning when the reduced player limit goes into effect a week from today.

Six players were involved in the latest link in the big chain of St. Louis-Cincinnati trades. The Cardinals acquired Durocher and two veteran pitchers, Curley Ogden and Dutch Henry, whom they will ship to the minors. Cincinnati got Sparky Adams, third baseman, and two pitchers, Paul Derringer and Allyn Stout. Derringer won 18 games in 1931, his first year with St. Louis. Last year he won 11 and lost 14.

Durocher and Adams broke in with their new teams yesterday. Durocher got two hits and fielded in his usual brilliant style. Joe Morrissey replaces him as the Cincinnati shortstop.

The trade, made on an even basis, was considered a good one for both clubs.

Daily Drama

By International News Service
The heroes—Hal Schumacher, Giants, and Earl Averill, Cleveland. Schumacher blanked Cincinnati, 5 to 0, yielding only two hits. Averill doubled eight hits, seven of them in a row, in two games against Yankees. The goats—Bill McAfee, Washington, and Bob Smith, Cincinnati. McAfee, nominated to stop a Detroit rally in the 10th inning, promptly lost the game by uncorking a wild pitch. Smith held Giants to two hits in first game of twin bill but lost, 1 to 0, on Leslie's homer.

AS BROKER'S TIP CAPTURES DERBY JUST BY A NOSE!

Broker's Tip, the winner, noses out Head Play for victory in a thrilling finish to the 1933 Kentucky Derby. View shows the exciting finish. Charley O is seen trailing. Time—2:06 4-5.

EARLY ACTION ON BATTLE OF JOCKEYS SEEN

Board of Stewards To Investigate Dressing Room Fight.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 8.—The board of stewards was to take action today in the exchange of fisticuffs between jockeys Herb Fisher and Don Meade which came as a postlude to the much-discussed nose victory of Broker's Tip over Head Play in 59th renewal of the Kentucky Derby Saturday.

Fisher's claim of a foul by Meade as the latter rode Col. E. R. Bradley's horse to win is forgotten, as far as the stewards are concerned, but the blows exchanged in the jockey's dressing room after the trophy was presented will be gone into thoroughly, they said.

The battle that ended in the dressing room began as the 3-year-olds swung into the stretch. In his effort to push Charley O, wide Fisher swerved Head Play sufficient to give Meade his opening along the rail and he shot Broker's Tip through.

NUDGED EACH OTHER
From then on it was a battle between Broker's Tip and Head Play, riding stride for stride, and frequently nudging one another.

"He tried to trick me out of it, and as a matter of fact I tricked him," said jockey Meade in answer to Fisher's charge that "he beat me out of it."

The basis of Fisher's charge was that Meade had grabbed his saddle blanket during the rough-riding, but a photograph taken as the two thoroughbreds thundered across the finish line showed Fisher had Meade's saddle blanket in a tight grip.

While the controversy was still raging the champion 3-year-old, Broker's Tip, departed for Maryland where he will fight it out with Head Play again in the Preakness. Head Play goes today.

Ladysman, the favorite, belonging to W. R. Coe, left with others of the eastern contingent for Maryland.

Charley O, which finished third in the Derby, will rest up here awhile for the American derby at Washington Park. Sarada and Trade Call will remain here until cured of the illness which cropped out after their arrival.

NEW STRENGTH FOR RED BIRDS NEARING

COLUMBUS, May 8.—This city's American association baseball club, the Red Birds, today was expected to receive new player strength as the result of a six-man deal made yesterday by the Cincinnati Reds and the St. Louis Cardinals.

John Ogden and Frank (Dutch) Henry, pitchers, two of the sextet affected by the trade, will in all likelihood be sent to the Red Birds as the Cards are rich in pitching strength.

Ogden and Henry, together with Leo Durocher, shortstop, were traded to the Cards by the Reds for Earl (Sparky) Adams, infielder, and Paul Derringer and Allyn Stout, pitchers. There was no cash involved in the deal.

A double in the ninth inning with two mates on bases gave the Birds their second straight game over Kansas City. They are in Milwaukee today.

Duray Owns Title of Most Colorful Loser In Automobile Racing World

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 8.—The most colorful loser in automobile racing will try again in the annual 500-mile classic at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway May 30.

Leon Duray, whose 11 years in competition in the Decoration Day contest has won $2,200 in sixth place prize money, is one of the last minute entries.

Duray will desert his two cycle motor principles, which he has puttered with for the past two races and bring to the track this year a new 4-cylinder, 220 cubic inch four cycle power plant.

Holder of the fastest lap record ever made over the two and a half mile track which he traveled at 124.018 miles an hour, Duray has always been a fast qualifier when his cars would run and has held the pole position many times. He is as daring a pilot as ever tooling a car through the sharp turns of the Hoosier track but one of the most unfortunate.

He has made eight attempts in these 11 years and for three years inability to get his car ready for qualification kept him on the sidelines. His complicated two cycle multiple cylindered job hardly got out of the garage last year.

DEFENDS POLICY

The president defended his farm policy by pointing out that in the past the government had agreed to redeem nearly thirty billions of dollars in debts in gold, while private corporations had underwritten 60 to 70 billions in securities and mortgages on life equity, whereas "they knew full well that all of the gold in the United States amounted to only between three and four billions."

"That all of the gold in the world amounted to only about eleven billions."

"Only one in twenty-five could claim on gold Mr. Roosevelt declared, and the administration merely has adopted the policy of treating all equally."

"Nevertheless," he added, "gold and to a partial extent silver, are perfectly good bases for currency and that is why I decided not to let any of the gold now in the country go out of it."

Lights of NEW YORK

Nassau is still one of my favorite streets. Wandering down from the vicinity of Brooklyn bridge where it loses its identity in Park Row, it finally strikes Wall street and becomes Broad. It does so in two ways—by changing its name and widening to about twice its former size.

Narrow and deviating to little from the straight line, Nassau street is one of the few Manhattan thoroughfares where the pedestrian has a chance. Wheeled traffic—and there is not much of it since drivers who can, avoid Nassau—moves so slowly it really doesn't count. Hence there are as many who travel in the middle of the street as use the sidewalks.

That holds true, especially during the luncheon recess. Then, Nassau's sidewalks are entirely made quate.

When the myriad of faces of the financial district pour for midday food Nassau street really comes into its own. It is an old street but then it becomes young. Clerks, stenographers and other workers connected with money come trooping into Nassau to eat, shop, chat with friends or parade down the narrow thoroughfare arm in arm. Those crowds, in the main, are youthful and full of the spirit of youth. They are good looking crowds also. In fact, this correspondence rates them higher in feminine attractiveness than any Park avenue parade he has witnessed.

Nassau's attraction for shoppers of the adjacent financial center of the country comes through the fact that almost anything may be bought there. Some of the stores, though they may be mere holes in the wall, have barkers. Others use loud speakers. So there is considerable noise and confusion. Prices also are attractive. Insofar as could be noted in a stroll from the statue of Benjamin Franklin—newsboys were selling papers at the feet of the Great Printer—down to the sub-treasury building, not a price ended in a naught or a five. The figures were all odd numbers, suggestive of bargains. There were bargains also, popular brands of cigarettes selling far below advertised prices and cigars that cost 50 cents each upturn being on display at 29 cents.

Most of the Nassau street shops do almost all their business during the luncheon hour. At other times of the day they are somnolent, with only a few languid clerks, and some times only the proprietor on duty. But when Wall street and its environs releases thousands of slaves of finance, Nassau street swarms into new life. Reserve forces of clerks take their places behind counters. The barkers and loud speakers labor mightily. Selling is keyed to high speed. Customers do not demur. Generally, they have only a few minutes to make their purchases. So the staccato service instead of being resented, is appreciated.

While competition between stores is keen, that on the sidewalks, which forms another mart, is still more keen. Pitchmen flock into Nassau street between noon and 2 p. m. Almost anything may be purchased right out in the open. New square street is the only New York

London—A complete talking film is to be made of the attempt to fly to the summit of Mount Everest. With the expedition of four or five men and two planes which left Britain for India recently, were three film men. They hope to make talking pictures of places and people never seen before.

The director of the film is Geoffrey Hinks, who directed the British films "Polaris" in northern Nigeria, and "Q Ships." The two cameramen are F. H. They were selected from a group of men, who were subjected to exhaustive physical, as well as technical tests.

Recently they were put into refrigerators, wearing electrically heated suits while the temperature was reduced to 40 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, which, it is believed, is the temperature of the arched atmosphere at 34,000 feet, at which they will have to fly.

Other technical difficulties have to be overcome in connection with the cameras. These will be electrically heated if being found in a recent test of one of the Everest planes that when the machine alighted after reaching a height of about 34,000 feet, one of the cameras was a solid block of ice and had to be thawed out. In addition, special lenses have had to be made, as ordinary lens would split in the intense cold at high altitudes.

Plan to Fly Over Peak.

The two planes, the Houston Westland and the Westland-Wallace, are capable of carrying a pilot and a cameraman, as well as two large cinematograph cameras, two oxygen sets, each in duplicate, and duplicated heating sets, to 36,000 feet, and over and around Everest's snow capped 29,141 feet, in eight minutes.

There will then be sufficient fuel for the planes to cruise around the summit for two hours while the cameras record everything below them. At the same time, the cameraman will describe what he sees, speaking into a dictaphone, the records of which will subsequently be

The president defended his policy by pointing out that in the past the government had agreed to redeem nearly thirty billions of dollars in debts in gold, while private corporations had underwritten 60 to 70 billions in securities and mortgages on like security, whereas "they knew full well that all of the gold in the United States amounted to only between three and four billions."

Only one in twenty-five could cash in on gold Mr. Roosevelt declared, and the administration merely has adopted the policy of treating all equally.

Lights of By NEW YORK TRUMBULL

Nassau is still one of my favorite streets. Wandering down from the vicinity of Brooklyn bridge, where it loses its identity in Park Row, it finally strikes Wall street and becomes Broad. It does so in two ways—by changing its name and widening to about twice its former size.

Narrow and deviating no little from the straight line, Nassau street is one of the few Manhattan thoroughfares where the pedestrian has a chance. Wheeled traffic—and there is not much of it since drivers who can, avoid Nassau—moves so slowly it really doesn't count. Hence there are as many who travel in the middle of the street as use the sidewalks.

That holds true, especially during the luncheon recess. Then, Nassau's sidewalks are entirely inadequate.

When the myriad offices of the financial district pause for midday food, Nassau street really comes into its own. It is an old street, but then it becomes young. Clerks, stenographers and other workers connected with money come trooping into Nassau to eat, shop, chatter with friends, or parade down the narrow thoroughfare arm in arm. Those crowds, in the main, are youthful and full of the spirit of youth. They are good-looking crowds also. In fact, this correspondent rates them higher in feminine attractiveness than any Park avenue parade he has witnessed.

Nassau's attraction for shoppers of the adjacent financial center of the country comes through the fact that almost anything may be bought there. Some of the stores, though they may be mere holes in the wall, have barkers. Others use loud speakers. So there is considerable noise and confusion. Prices also are attractive. Insofar as could be noted in a stroll from the statue of Benjamin Franklin—newsboys were selling papers at the feet of the Great Printer—down to the sub-treasury building, not a price ended in a naught or a five. The figures were all odd numbers, suggestive of bargains. There were bargains also, popular brands of cigarettes selling far below advertised prices and cigars that cost 50 cents each uptown being on display at 29 cents.

Most of the Nassau street shops do almost all their business during the luncheon hour. At other times of the day they are somnolent, with only a few languid clerks, and some times only the proprietor on duty. But when Wall street and its environs releases thousands of slaves of finance, Nassau street springs into new life. Reserve forces of clerks take their places behind counters. The barkers and loud speakers labor mightily. Selling is keyed to high speed. Customers do not demur. Generally, they have only a few minutes to make their purchases. So the staccato service, instead of being resented, is appreciated.

While competition between stores is keen, that on the sidewalks, which forms another mart, is still more keen. Pitchmen flock into Nassau street between noon and 2 p. m. Almost anything may be purchased right out in the open. New sau street is the only New York

America's Part

The country will await with interest, probably not unmixed with some anxiety, developments concerning how far the United States will be willing to go in establishing a consultation pact under the Briand-Kellogg anti-war treaty.

Reports out of Washington and the statement of Norman H. Davis before the disarmament conference at Geneva indicate clearly that Mr. Roosevelt is giving consideration to such a proposal. "Our ability to make our collaboration effective," Mr. Davis explained further, "will depend in large part on the measure of disarmament we now may be able to achieve."

It long has been the desire of Europe to get the United States into a consultation pact, France especially having been hopeful of such a result.

No anti war treaty can be effective without a provision of this kind or some other measure looking to cooperation of the signatories to bring pressure to bear upon a nation which breaks or threatens to break the treaty.

Absurd, preposterous! You don't grasp my position — my position, the conditions that prevail in Nave-stock. It is possible —

He stopped, took off his glasses, and wiped them with much agitation.

"You mean, Dr. Threadgold, that the local conditions are too strong for us?"

"Please do not put your words into my mouth. I have been responsible for the health of this town for twenty years. And then you, a young man, come, and work in a sly and secretive sort of way, and insinuate that I have done less than I should have done. I can't follow your line of feeling, sir, or understand your idea of loyalty."

Wolfe stood his ground. "I am sorry. Certain facts forced themselves upon my notice. Perhaps they were more obvious to a man fresh from a course of public health. These observations of mine — such as they are — are yours. Take them, criticize them, use them as you please."

Threadgold stared like a man who has caught a sudden glimpse of a mad bull charging at him down a narrow passage.

"Do I understand you to say —?"

"I will place my notes and papers in your hands. The material is one expense saved. But, ah, what a change! What ravages time has wrought. The almost new headpiece of last September has a sadly dejected look. You try it on in front of the mirror and its dejection is transferred to you. So you place it over by your fishing tongs and go out to buy a brand new — lament, commiserate with the fineness of the season and your own self-respect. There is no harm in Gilead for the man with an 'L' in straw hat."

That Old Straw Hat REMEMBER when you hung it away last fall how you told yourself it "looked almost as good as new" and you made a mental reservation to wear it again next summer?

THE CHALLENGE OF LOVE by WARWICK DEEPING

Mr. Wolfe, has it occurred to you that all this is grossly insulting to me?" asked Threadgold.

"My dear, I was compelled to have a talk with Mr. Wolfe after dinner to-day. I don't think he fully realized his position till this afternoon."

"I am glad to hear it."

"I detest scenes, my dear, but a scene was absolutely necessary. I had to pitch into the young man to show him that I could not and would not stand any nonsense. Wolfe appears to be one of those self-assured fellows, utterly lacking in sentiment, and devoid of the more delicate instincts of a gentleman."

The largeness of the declaration was excellent, Mrs. Sophia's hand hovered over the sugar basin.

"You told him about that map?"

"My dear — the result of our interview was that Mr. Wolfe offered to surrender all his notes and plans to me."

"Yes, Montague, but have you got them?"

"I have. They are locked up in my desk."

He threw out the lower part of his white waistcoat, and stood with pursed lips, spectacles glimmering, a little bladder of a man inflated with words. Threadgold and his wife had fitted themselves into the trivial scheme of mere physical appearances. The little etiquettes and diplomacies of a carefully planned professional career had become for them the whole Book of the Law.

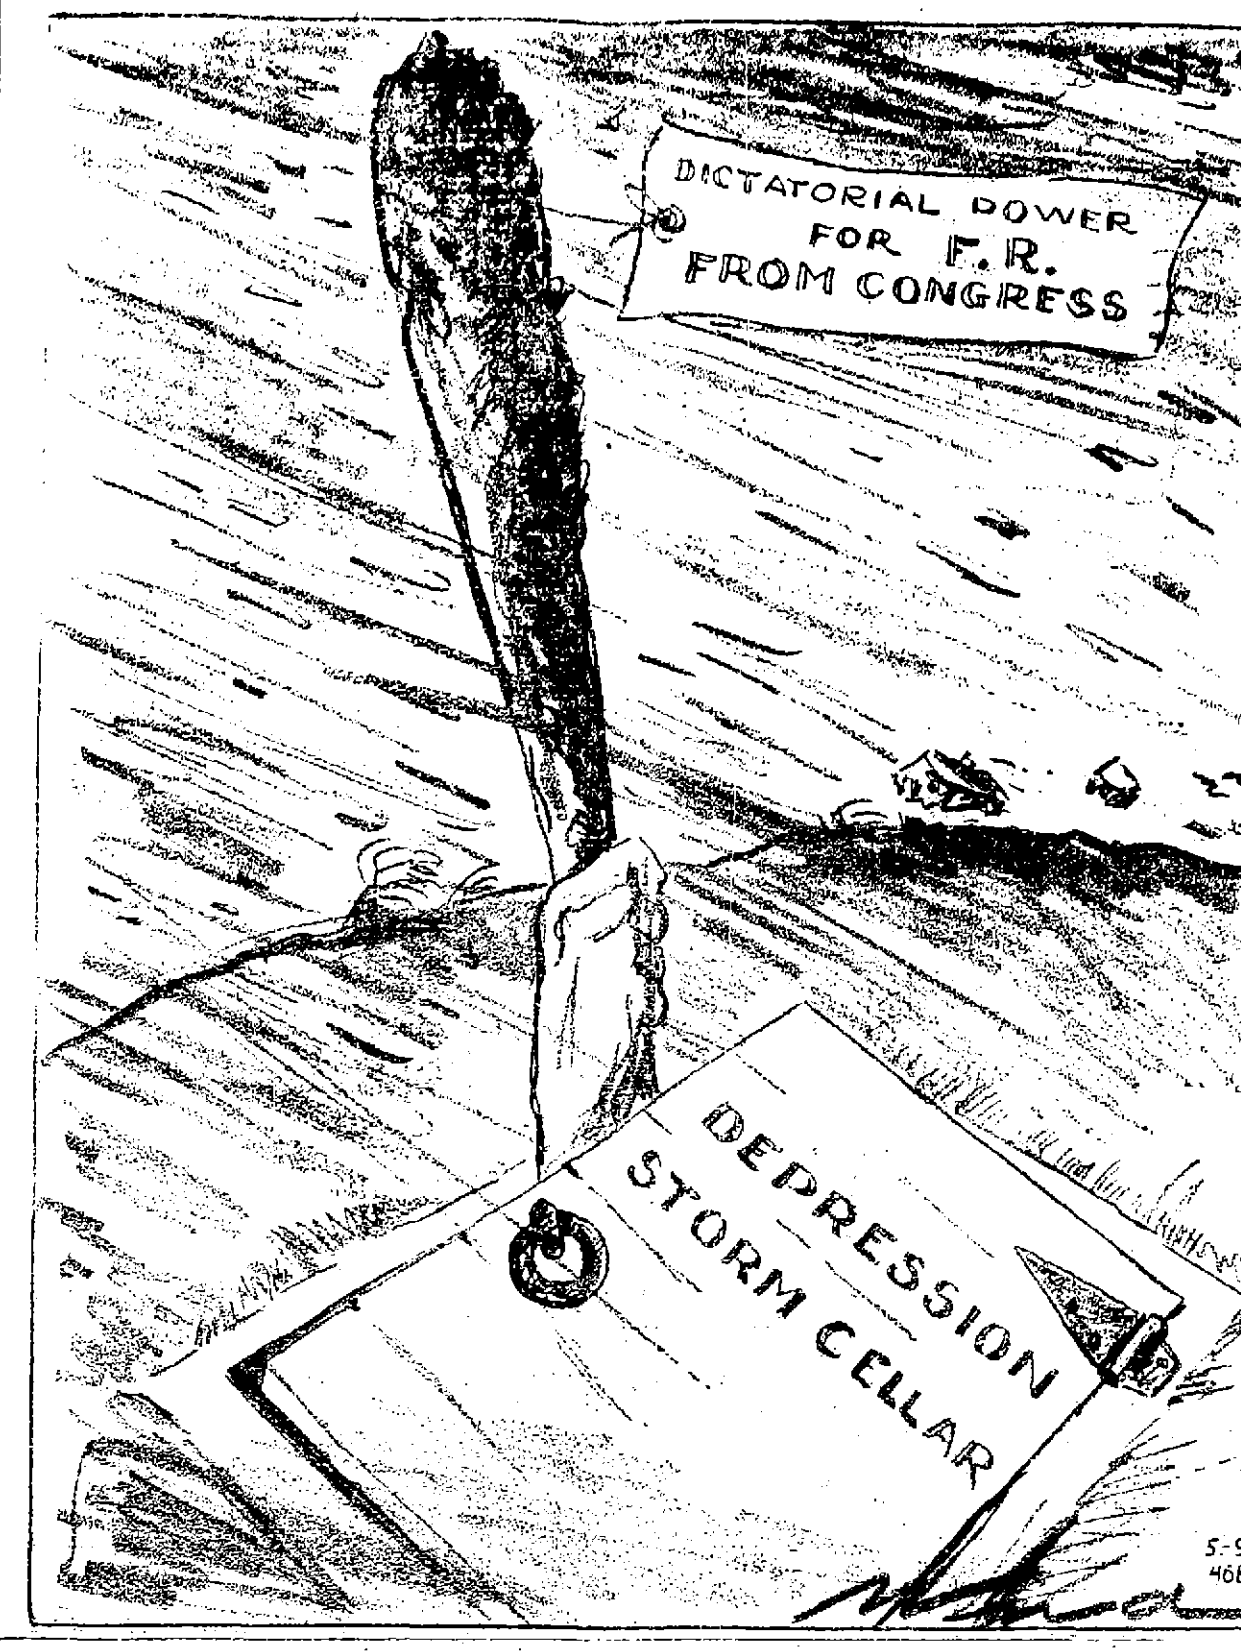

Their whole consciousness was posted round with notice boards on home and crown in the same strain. However bloody one comb may be, the other cock's comb is sure to be bloodier.

About three in the afternoon Dr. Montague Threadgold took a glass of port, shook his feathers, and fell into meditation like an old barn-door rooster who has been dusted around the rickyard by some fierce and lanky game-cock. The experience had been humiliating, and the little man saw further humiliations before him unless he could strike an attitude that would be convincing. A second glass of wine helped him to think better of his own dignity. By tea-time he was able to stand sententiously upon the hearthrug and give Mrs. Sophia an account of the affair.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE Dr. Threadgold was infuriated... Wolfe had touched him to the fighting point. Timid, sententious, a shirker of awkward corners, he was lifted at last into an outburst of stuttering anger against this man whose abominable sincerity refused to take account of the delicately adjusted hypocrisies of life.

"Mr. Wolfe, has it occurred to you that all this is grossly insulting to me?" asked Threadgold.

Congress:—"Here you are, Mr. President; we're right behind you!"

MOVIES

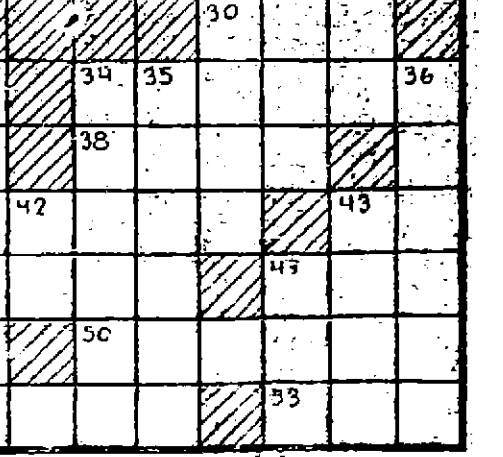

At THE CLIFTONA In the production of an air thriller, such as Richard Barthelmess' latest starring picture, for First National, "Central Airport," now showing at the Cliftona, every person connected with its making undergoes grave hazards.

Every precaution was taken in the making of this picture to prevent accidents, but even with the utmost care exercised, three planes were destroyed, and that is one very serious, injured, and a little short of miraculous. The best result of human contrivance, with the crooked shoulder with several persons severely bruised.

Paul Mantz, a stunt flyer, crashed up his plane, but escaped with a broken shoulder. A big passenger plane carrying Richard Barthelmess, Tom Brown, Glenda Farrell and others, miscalculated a landing, flurried with a telegraph pole and a lot of wires, overturned and was smashed, but fortunately no one was injured beyond bad bruises and a severe shaking up.

State Movement For Renovating Program Starts

COLUMBUS, May 8.—State-wide movement for Spring clean-up and renovating program has been launched by Governor Whittier Work Project Development Committee as part of its general plan to create work for Ohio jobless.

Co-operation of chambers of commerce, civic, labor and other public-spirited organizations throughout Ohio is sought by the Committee for inaugurating clean-up campaigns in their respective communities.

Columbus was one of the first cities to join in the movement, for which a "Renew Columbus Committee" functioned, commencing a "Clean-up Week" program along similar lines.

FARM PRICES RISE WHILE OTHERS FALL

Although Rise Aids Agriculture It Is Not Yet Felt By Ohio Farmers.

Farm prices in the United States were higher April 15 than at any time since last September. They rose 6 per cent in 20 days while the prices of the things the farmers buy declined 1 per cent.

Buying power of farm products, in terms of things the farmer buys with what he sells, is as a rule, higher now than at any time since November, according to C. H. Arnold, extension economist of the Ohio State University.

That rise in prices, although of general benefit to agriculture, has not yet greatly improved the Ohio farmer's position, says Arnold, for the rises occurred chiefly in grains, fruits, and vegetables, which are not now being sold in large amounts by farmers in Ohio.

Prices for meat animals, poultry and dairy products rose, other not at all or very little, while feed prices advanced. Grain prices rose moderately, and the prices of cotton and vegetables 10 per cent.

When at its cents a bushel, the highest farm price April 15, in two years, was worth more than 18 cents. Prices for hogs, cattle, and calves were lower than in April a year ago.

America's Part

THE country will await with interest, probably not unshared with some anxiety, developments concerning how far the United States will be willing to go in establishing a consultation pact under the Briand-Kellogg anti-war treaty.

Reports out of Washington and the statement of Norman H. Davis before the disarmament conference at Geneva indicate clearly that Mr. Roosevelt is giving consideration to such a proposal. "Our ability to make our collaboration effective," Mr. Davis explained further, "will depend in large part on the measure of disarmament we now may be able to achieve."

It long has been the desire of Europe to get the United States into a consultation pact, France especially having been hopeful of such a result.

No anti war treaty can be effective without a provision of this kind or some other measure looking to cooperation of the signatories to bring pressure to bear upon a nation which breaks or threatens to break the treaty. Absence of any such provision in connection with the Kellogg treaty is the latter's greatest weakness. Yet, it is a serious question how far the United States should go in tying itself up with Europe in a way that would make it a party to the latter's quarrels and wars. Any consultation pact which did not contemplate effective action, however far this might lead—in preserving the treaty would prove merely a gesture and, therefore, useless.

It was the desire to prevent America from becoming embroiled in Europe's quarrels that kept this country out of the League of Nations. Whether popular sentiment on this question has changed can not be definitely known now, but there seems good reason to doubt if there has been a complete reversal.

Disarmament, war debts, economic and political questions are so intermingled at present in the problems the United States and Europe are trying to solve, it is hard to get a clear perspective of the situation as a whole. There are many pitfalls, and to guard against these in any projected course for the United States should be the chief purpose of those formulating the nation's foreign policies.

The country will remain hopeful that the administration will not lose sight of this important question.

Aiding Home Buyers

OPTIMISM as to the future of the building and loan association plan expressed by banking authorities is welcome. The situation has not been satisfactory in some parts of the country. There have been bad spots and some remains, although most of them have been cleared up.

But there has been at no time any cause for general criticism of the building and loan plan, for any general fear, or for any withdrawals, from any well-managed association.

The building and loan system of saving and home-building or home-buying is sound. It has contributed very much to the welfare of all communities where it has been generally adopted. It has encouraged thrift and stability, and has been a real valuable asset in industrial and social development.

But the plan, in competent and honest hands, is as sound today as it ever was and as serviceable to the community and to the individual.

That Old Straw Hat

REMEMBER when you hung it away last fall how you told yourself it "looked almost as good as new" and you made a mental resolve to wear it again next summer?

Of course there were a few spots on the crown, the ribbon shows a stain or two from rain on the outside and perspiration on the inside and there was a slight abrasion on the brim due to the combination of a windy day and a very hard pavement. Still, it was a pretty good looking old straw hat.

And so you go to take it down from its nail rejoicing that here is

THE CHALLENGE OF LOVE by WARWICK DEEPIING

SYNOPSIS

The smug little town of Navestock jolted on, rustily, clumsily, contented to jog along in a rut, resenting the interference of anyone who sought to change its mode of living. The people, therefore, were very antagonistic toward young Dr. John Wolfe, assistant to the town's blundering old Dr. Threadgold, when he tried to better conditions. The young physician realizes also the pitiable plight of the inhabitants in the hands of the old doctor, who cautions him to be more sparing in the use of "necessary" medicines. Wolfe, stunned at the unsanitary conditions he finds everywhere, prepares a map showing the unhealthy districts. Mrs. Threadgold comes upon the map and considering Wolfe's researches "gross disloyalty and underhand spying," suggests that he be warned to discontinue or be discharged. Despite the community's feeling towards the capable young doctor, the Rev. Robert Flemming is impressed by his efficiency in ministering to the sick. Wolfe's one inducement to keep fighting is the friendship and encouragement of lovely and vivacious Jess Mascall. Wolfe shows Dr. Threadgold the dangerous germs he found in the well-water of a house where there is a case of diphtheria. The narrow-minded Threadgold, afraid to face facts and fearing Wolfe may usurp his position, resents the younger man's "interference." Wolfe warns of a terrible calamity should typhoid fever or cholera strike Navestock.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

Dr. Threadgold was infuriated. . . Wolfe had touched him to the fighting point. Timid, sententious, a shirker of awkward corners, he was lifted at last into an outburst of stuttering anger against this man whose abominable sincerity refused to take account of the delicately adjusted hypocrisies of life.

"Mr. Wolfe, has it occurred to you that all this is grossly insulting to me?" asked Threadgold.

Wolfe looked very grave.

"I thought, sir, that you might be glad of the facts."

"Indeed!"

"I am perfectly ready to accept all the responsibility."

Threadgold's face expressed bewildered disgust.

"Absurd, preposterous! You don't grasp my position—my position, the conditions that prevail in Navestock. It is impossible."

He stopped, took off his glasses, and wiped them with much agitation.

"You mean, Dr. Threadgold, that the local conditions are too strong for us?"

"Please do not put your words into my mouth. I have been responsible for the health of this town for twenty years. And then you, a young man, come, and work in a sly and secretive sort of way, and insinuate that I have done less than I should have done. I can't follow your line of feeling, sir, or understand your idea of loyalty."

Wolfe stood his ground.

"I am sorry. Certain facts forced themselves upon my notice. Perhaps they were more obvious to a man fresh from a course of public health. These observations of mine—such as they are—are yours. Take them, criticize them, use them as you please."

Threadgold stared like a man who has caught a sudden glimpse of a mad bull charging at him down a narrow passage.

"Do I understand you to say . . . ?"

"I will place my notes and papers on your hands. The material is you, since I am paid for my time here. I have no desire to usurp any of your authority."

"Mr. Wolfe, has it occurred to you that all this is grossly insulting to me?" asked Threadgold.

Threadgold would like to have thrust the responsibility from him with gestures of violent dismay. He faltered, clutched at the thought that it would be best to temporize, to get these papers into his hands, and examine them. Weak men have a fatal affection for vague promises and careful circumlocutions. They are afraid to speak out, afraid even to be completely, decently, and damnably selfish.

"Very good, Mr. Wolfe, very good. Let me have these papers. 'You shall have them at once.'"

And in half an hour they were locked up in Dr. Threadgold's desk.

Few people can keep to the truth when describing a battle they have fought, some frays of words in which they have been worsted. Those deadly sarcasms that so often arrive too late upon the field of action, are too brilliant to be ignored, and are dragged cunningly into the tale. A weak and pompous man must lie with emphasis when he is explaining a squabble to his wife. He has his domestic dignity to consider, and words—like a sword—are easy things to flourish when no one is there to cut in with a contradiction. "He won't forget that in a hurry, eh? I had him there. Much too sharp for the beast. I said so and so, and so and so, and so and so. Yes—I did. You should have seen him squirm. A few home truths, my dear. Nothing like letting a man know that he is a cad!" But the curious part of it is that both the combatants go home and crow in the same strain. However bloody one comb may be, the other cock's comb is sure to be bloodier.

About three in the afternoon Dr. Threadgold took a glass of port, shook his feathers, and fell into meditation like an old barn-door rooster who has been dusted around the rickyard by some fierce and lanky game-cock. The experience had been humiliating, and the little man saw further humiliations before him unless he could strike an attitude that would be convincing. A second glass of wine helped him to think better of his own dignity. By tea-time he was able to stand sententially upon the hearthrug and give Mrs. Sophia an account of the affair.

"My dear, I was compelled to have a talk with Mr. Wolfe after dinner to-day. I don't think he fully realized his position till this afternoon."

Mrs. Threadgold's face was non-committal. She read the level of her husband's sententiousness as she read the barometer in the hall.

"I am glad to hear it."

"I detest scenes, my dear, but a scene was absolutely necessary. I had to pitch into the young man, to show him that I could not and would not stand any nonsense. Wolfe appears to be one of those self-assured fellows, utterly lacking in sentiment, and devoid of the more delicate instincts of a gentleman."

The largeness of the declamation was excellent. Mrs. Sophia's hand hovered over the sugar basin.

"You told him about that map?"

"My dear—the result of our interview was that Mr. Wolfe offered to surrender all his notes and plans to me."

"Yes, Montague, but have you got them?"

"I have. They are locked up in my desk."

He threw out the lower part of his white waistcoat, and stood with pursed lips, spectacles glimmering, a little bladder of a man inflated with words. Threadgold and his wife had fitted themselves into the trivial scheme of more physical appearances. The little etiquettes and diplomacies of a carefully planned professional career had become for them the whole Book of the Law. Their whole consciousness was posted round with notice boards on which were inscribed "Good Form," "Gentility," "Niceness," "Tact."

They asked themselves by a natural impulse, "Will this please So-and-so? Will So-and-so be offended? If I do this or that, will it be profitable and in proper taste?"

Mrs. Threadgold handed her husband his tea.

"Now that you have got these papers, Montague, the matter is easily settled."

"I am going to look them over."

"All you have to do is to burn them."

"My dear, one moment—"

"I said burn them. And send Mr. Wolfe about his business without further delay."

State Movement For Renovating Program Starts

COLUMBUS, May 8.—State-wide movement for Spring clean-up and renovating program has been launched by Governor White's Work Project Development Committee as part of its general plan to create work for Ohio's jobless.

Co-operation of chambers of commerce, civic, relief and other public-spirited organizations throughout Ohio is sought by the Committee for inaugurating clean-up campaigns in their respective communities.

Columbus was one of the first cities to join in the movement, for which a "Renew Columbus Committee" functioned. Cincinnati is completing a "Clean-up Week" program along similar lines.

Two other major objectives contemplated by the Project Work Development Committee in its drive against unemployment are:

1. Survey of all work projects in the state requiring a maximum of unskilled labor.

2. Balanced program of public works construction for Ohio.

Ohio Relief Commission, which appointed the Project Work Development Committee at the behest of Governor White, estimates that more than 200,000 families in Ohio are almost wholly dependent upon public help and require an expenditure of almost a million dollars a week by federal state or local governments to provide them with the necessities of life.

FARM PRICES RISE WHILE OTHERS FALL

Although Rise Aids Agriculture It Is Not Yet Felt By Ohio Farmers.

Farm prices in the United States were higher April 15 than at any time since last September. They rose 6 per cent in 30 days while the prices of the things the farmers buy declined 1 per cent.

Buying power of farm products, in terms of things the farmer buys with what he sells, is, as a result, higher now than at any time since November, according to C. R. Arnold, extension economist for the Ohio State University.

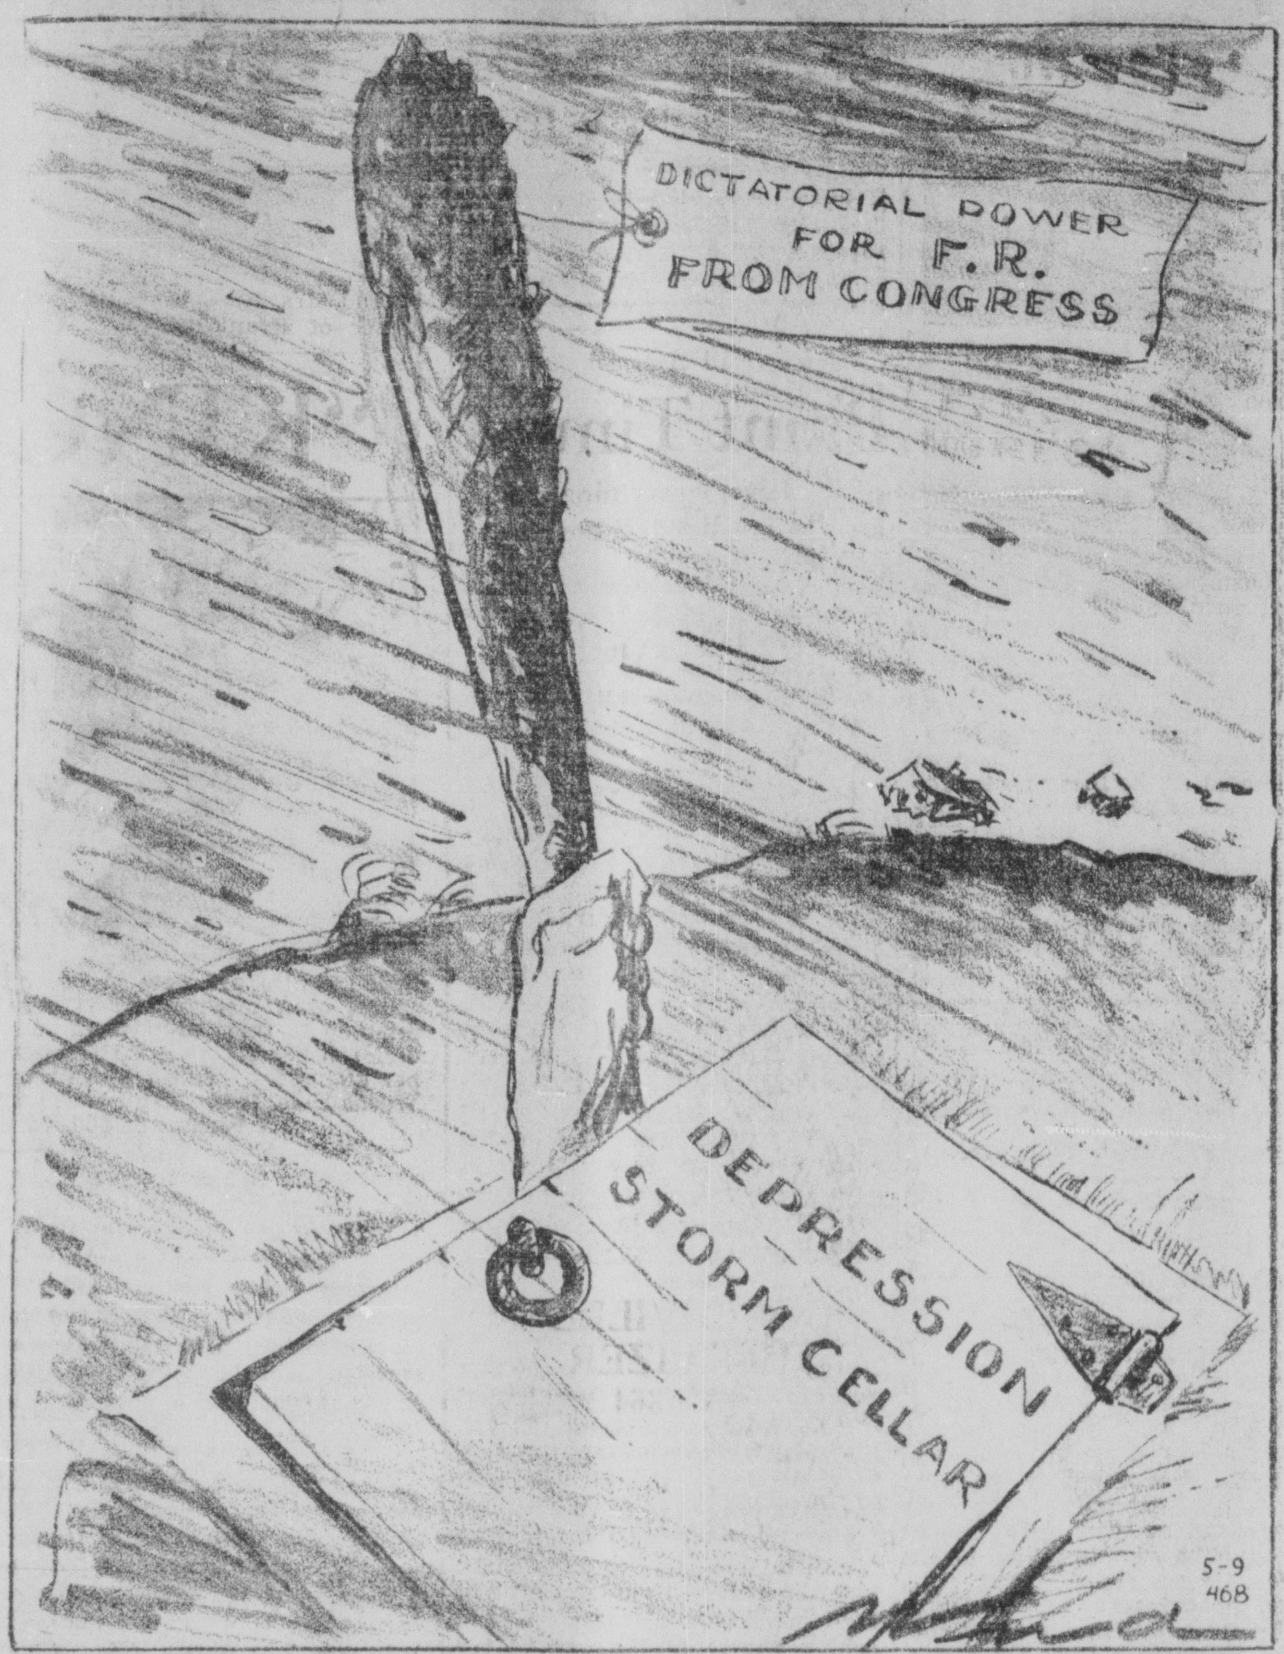

This rise in prices, although of general benefit to agriculture, has not as yet greatly improved the Ohio farmer's position, says Arnold, for the rises occurred chiefly in grains, fruits, and vegetables, which are not now being sold in large amounts by farmers in this state.

Prices for meat animals, poultry and dairy products, rose either not at all or very little, while feed prices advanced. Grain prices rose 30 per cent, and the prices of fruits and vegetables 10 per cent.

Wheat, at 58 cents, stood at the highest farm price April 15 in two years; oats were worth more than in 12 months, corn more than in 18 months. Prices for hogs, cattle, veal calves were lower than in April a year ago.

University Radio Station Planning To Broadcast Ohio Cities' Talent

COLUMBUS, May 8.—Ohio State University's radio station, WEAQ, in its program this week features talent from several Ohio cities.

This glee club, having members from many Ohio cities is directed by Margaret Benedict. Prof. Philip Peterson, member of the Ohio University faculty, will contribute tenor solos.

Preceding the Athens program, at 8:30 the same evening, Ohio State University's concert band will broadcast the first of its Wednesday night twilight concerts from the Mirror Lake hollow. Solo numbers will be contributed by Donald Ruppertsburg, baritone, of Lakewood, and Richard Sterling, trombone, of Youngstown.

Saturday, May 13, at 5 p. m., the Gambier public schools will broadcast a program from WEAQ, with Marie West in charge.

The same night, starting at 8 p. m., Fairfield-co boys and girls will present a weekly 4-H Club program from the Ohio State University station. The Fairfield Future Farmers chorus will sing, and Loren Graham will be a soloist. Fred Conrad, president of the Future Farmers, and Charles Eversole will be the speakers.

Tonight I. C. Hoffman, of the Ohio Experiment Station, Wooster, was a speaker in the farm night program from WEAQ.

In addition to these programs, the week's broadcasts will include talks by Ohio State University faculty members on various educational subjects, and music by campus groups.

ASHVILLE STUDIES GAIN HONORS ON CAMPUS OF O. S. U.

COLUMBUS, May 8.—Two Ashville students at Ohio State University have won campus honors the past week.

Curtis W. Cromley and Joseph C. Peters have been elected to Sigma Chi, an honorary society having as its members the managers of Buckeye athletic team.

Cromley has been a manager of the track team. He has been prominent in fraternity activities this year, being house manager and treasurer of Alpha Gamma Rho. He is in the third year of the agriculture-veterinary medicine course.

Peters won his membership by being manager of the rifle team. He has also been a manager of the fencing team. He, like Cromley, is a member of Alpha Gamma Rho. He is a junior, majoring in animal husbandry.

The Housewife's Question Box

Question:—What are the "conquering" colors this spring in clothes?

Answer:—Of course you know that the neutral colors—the beiges and grays—have come back with a great triumph this spring. Equally important is blue including a purplish blue, and the ever-lastingly smart black.

Blue and white and black are as much part of the spring picture as the flowers that bloom, but black and white is often much more appealing if a touch of very bright color is added, such as yellow, candy pink, or brilliant purple.

For this is a season of color contrast—a blue blouse will accent a gray ensemble, or a pale pink or a slaty blue one will lift the tone of the dark suit.

"KING KONG"

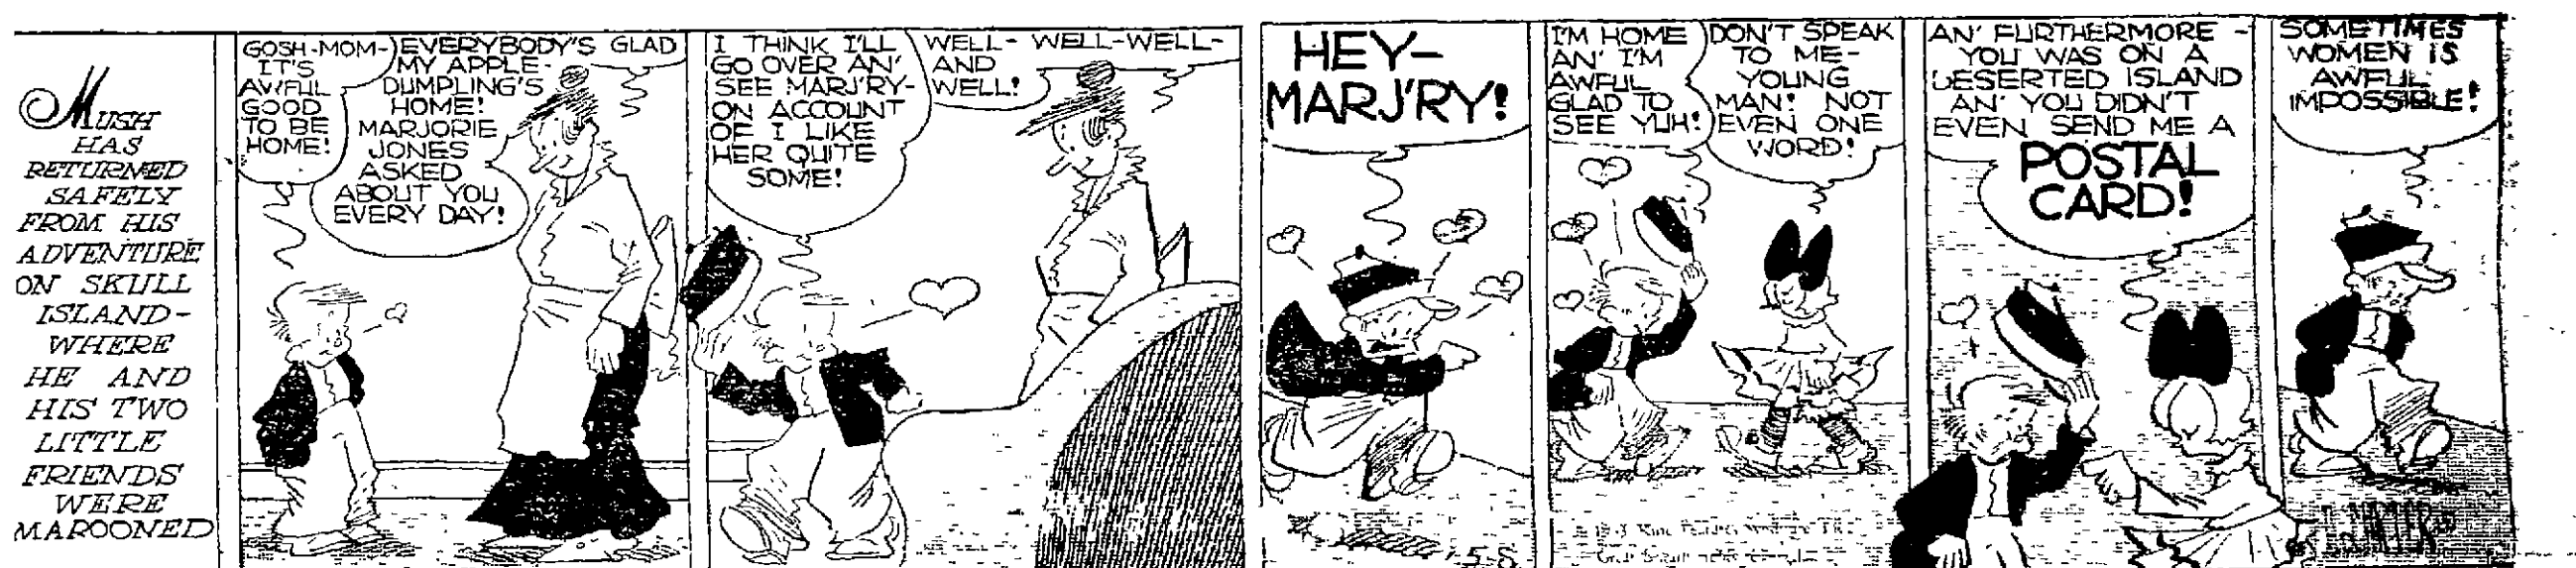

"King Kong" wants his beautiful golden Ann as he has never wanted anything before in the millions of years of his life—he pursues her and her lover Driscoll to the wall of the native village. Never before has he made an assault against this defense but now he makes a battering ram of himself and the gates give away.

"King Kong" rips off the top of one hut after another, peering into each in search of Ann. At first he only rumbles an impatient disappointment, but as he meets failure his tone sharpens to fury. Driscoll is hurrying Ann to the ship, while Denham, hiding behind trees, is excited over a new plan. Instead of making a movie of "King Kong," why not capture him alive?

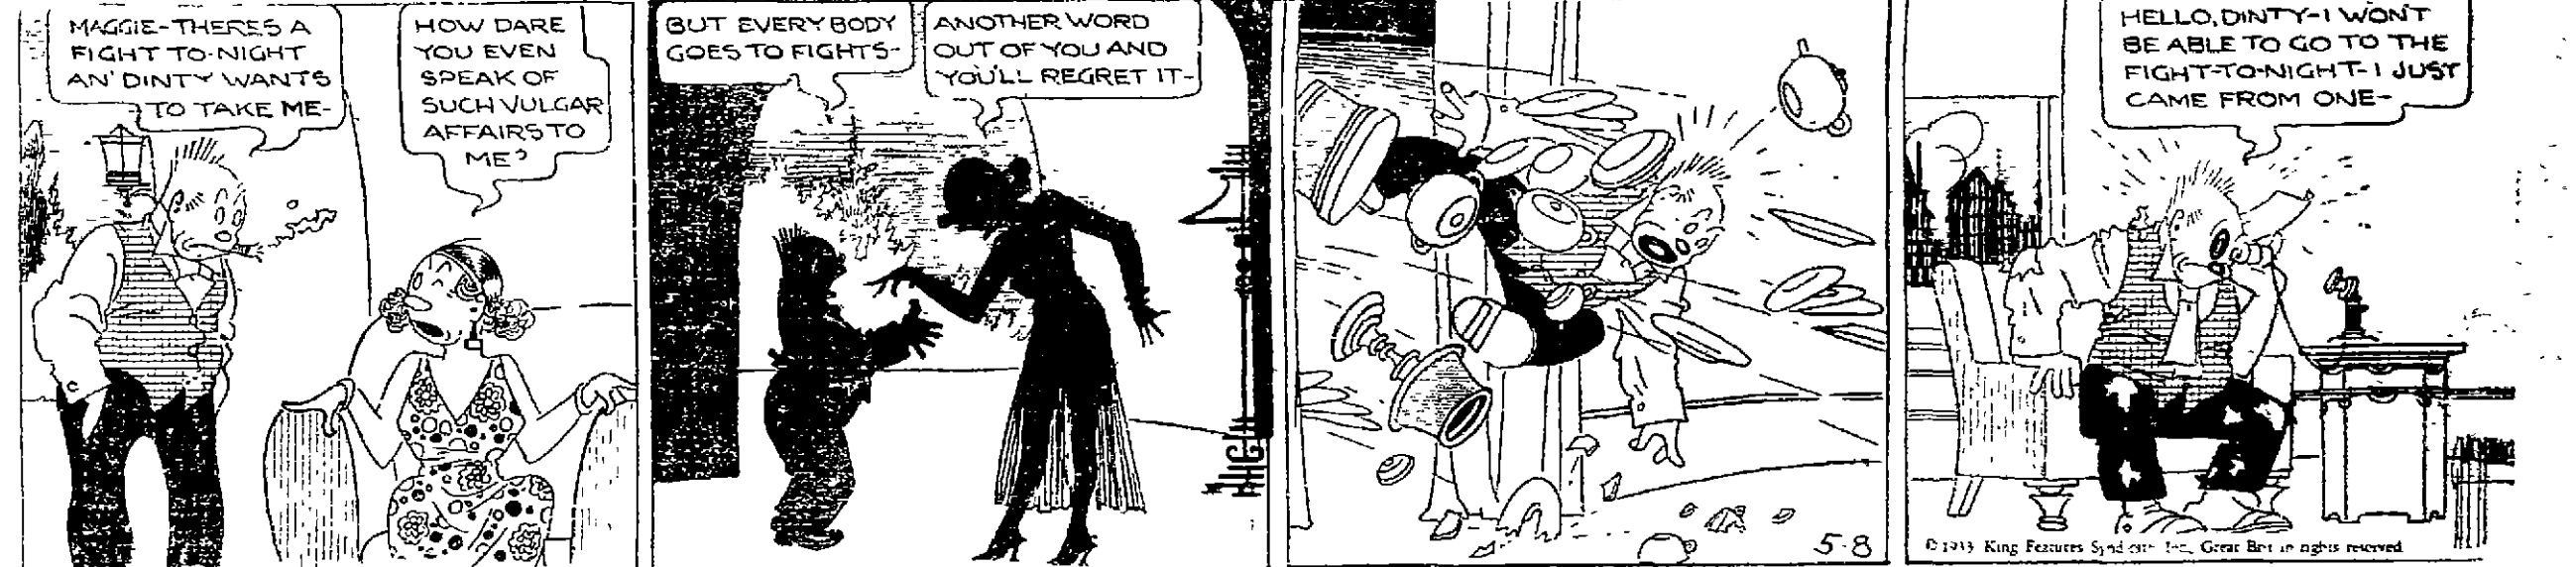

After demolishing the village and killing many natives, "King Kong" comes to the open beach and spies Ann's golden hair in the moonlight. He beats his chest and starts in pursuit when suddenly a cloud of gas from a bomb envelops him. To his amazement he is without strength!

Denham orders a raft built to float him to the Adventurer. "King Kong," exhibited to civilization, will make a fortune for all of them. All think him crazy, but Denham believes he has "King Kong" licked. Always lord of his own world—always victorious—"King Kong" has been beaten at last, and by something beyond his experience—something he will fear!

Theft of Ex-Husband's Love Charged to Society Dowager

Mrs. Altemus Eastman, Leader of Exclusive Racing Set, Accused of Alienating Affections of Mate She Divorced 22 Years Ago.

A novel situation, created by the filing of suit against Mrs. Bessie Dobson Altemus Eastman for the alleged alienation of the affections of the husband she divorced 22 years ago, has stunned the exclusive society racing set in Philadelphia. The plaintiff, Miss Estelle Maxwell, charges that Mrs. Eastman is following a "dog in the manger" course with regard to her former husband, Lemuel Altemus, and has prevented her ex-mate from marrying Miss Maxwell, although plaintiff and Altemus have been engaged for several years. While Mrs. Eastman was branding the charges as absurd and ridiculous, Miss Maxwell's attorneys were busy going into details of the complaint. Among other things, Miss Maxwell charges that James Altemus, son of Mrs. Eastman, visited his father on Christmas Day, and during an altercation which ensued, beat the elder Altemus so severely that he was removed to a hospital. She further charges that Mrs. Eastman threatened that if Altemus did not break his engagement, she would have him confined in a mental sanitarium. And since that time, Miss Maxwell asserts, she has neither seen nor heard of her fiancé. Mrs. Eastman is the mother-in-law of John Hay Whitney, millionaire turfman, who married her daughter, Mary Elizabeth. She is one of the most prominent leaders of Philadelphia society.

Theft of Ex-Husband's Love Charged to Society Dowager

Mrs. Altemus Eastman, Leader of Exclusive Racing Set, Accused of Alienating Affections of Mate She Divorced 22 Years Ago.

A novel situation, created by the filing of suit against Mrs. Bessie Dobson Altemus Eastman for the alleged alienation of the affections of the husband she divorced 22 years ago, has stunned the exclusive society racing set in Philadelphia. The plaintiff, Miss Estelle Maxwell, charges that Mrs. Eastman is following a "dog in the manger" course with regard to her former husband, Lemuel Altemus, and has prevented her ex-mate from marrying Miss Maxwell, although plaintiff and Altemus have been engaged for several years. While Mrs. Eastman's attorneys were busy charges as absurd and ridiculous, Miss Maxwell's attorneys were busy going into details of the complaint. Among other things, Miss Maxwell charges that James Altemus, son of Mrs. Eastman, visited his father on Christmas Day, and during an altercation which ensued, beat the elder Altemus so severely that he was removed to a hospital. She further charges that Mrs. Eastman threatened that if Altemus did not break his engagement she would have him confined in a mental sanitarium. And since that time, Miss Maxwell asserts, she has neither heard of, nor seen, her fiance. Mrs. Eastman is the mother-in-law of John Hay Whitney, millionaire turfman, who married her daughter, Mary Elizabeth. She is one of the most prominent leaders of Philadelphia society.

OBSERVE MOTHERS DAY the GOLDEN RULE WAY —

"TIRED FINGERS"

Tired fingers to work, to write, to sew, and mending from noon till night. Tired hands, and eyes that blink. Drooping head too tired to think.

Tired arms that once had pressed A baby head to a mother's breast. Tired once to sit, to do, to say "Sleep well, darling, mother's here."

Tired fingers to work, to write, to sew, and mending from noon till night. Tired hands, and eyes that blink. Drooping head too tired to think.

In honor of Mother—WHATSOEVER you would that others should do for YOUR MOTHER if she were left destitute, do ye even so for other mothers and dependent children, millions of whom today, through unemployment and other causes beyond their control, are suffering, and some of them dying, for lack of the simple necessities of life.

Suggestions for Mothers' Day Observance
